

Celebrating 125 Years with Pride

-submitted by Sue Geary, Social Justice Council

For the past several years, First Unitarian Church has participated in the annual Pride Parade wearing our Standing on the Side of Love T-shirts and walking behind our banner. Before that, we were flag wranglers helping with the HUUUUGE rainbow flag at the end of the parade. But, that was all before we had a big birthday. Now that we are 125-years-old, we will have a float in the Pride Parade on Sunday, June 5. The theme of this year's celebration is Icons, and 125 years running as a progressive church in Salt Lake City surely qualifies us as one of those.

Pride 2014

We will portray our history with costumes representing the 1890s, the 1920s, the 1960s, and the present. Members of the choir will lead us in singing a few familiar songs along the way. We hope to have some contemporary dancers to add a little pizzazz. Anyone who wishes to participate is welcome to join us, either in a costume or wearing a t-shirt that represents our church. We have extended an invitation to other UU congregations in the state. Thus far, we know that members from Ogden will be with us. Most of us will be walking alongside the float.

If you wish to join us, we will need to know in advance of the parade. This year, each participant must sign a Waiver and Release of Damages form that we must collect and submit at the starting area. The Social Justice Council will have the forms available at a table following church on Sunday, May 29 (service at 10:00 only). You may also contact Sue Geary at 801-554-6691 to get a form.

Here are the details for those who will participate:

Reverently Yours

These are politically charged times, and they can take your breath away. Where do we turn to when winded from the constancy of polls pointing to bleak futures, and the unraveling of civility making the presidential race seem savage? The Trump phenomenon, which the media clings to like a dog its bone, fills us with dizzying scenarios of an intolerant society. It feels inconceivable that more than two centuries after the Enlightenment, fundamental freedoms for women, people of color, immigrants, and the LGBTQ community remain conspicuously absent. In fact, new state laws are being passed like hotcakes to further restrict basic human rights. Obstinate in their war on science, America's conservatives refuse to let climate change evidence influence their penchant for a god-fearing past and relentless economic growth for the future.

Where do we turn to in this lunacy? You may not be surprised to hear me say "our church." But not for the reasons you think. The image that quickly comes to mind is our church's fierce stance on protecting American liberties. Social justice is our creed, and protest our spiritual practice. Some say the minister rails too frequently against social injustice, eco-injustice, and the frightening neglect of the poor by our nation's leaders. Yet the social issues of our day come wrapped in moral imperatives, which deserve a religious response if not an outcry of dissent.

Yes, our church advocates for social change. But what remains crucial is that our church also serves as a refuge from the daily onslaught of social crises. Our church as sanctuary – the true meaning of sanctuary implying shelter – was made apparent by the magnificent performance of our choir singing the requiem (music by Dave Zabriskie; libretto by Kathleen Cahill). The composition had a profound impact on the congregation, reminding us that our church serves partly as a springboard to social engagement, but also as a safe haven to examine personal issues and begin the process of healing.

Rev. Tom Goldsmith

In the swirl of social movements, our music program generally keeps us grounded in the more personal aspects of life, feeding us with meat for the spirit. Perhaps the writer, Charles Bukowski had it right when he said:

"An intellectual says a simple thing in a hard way. An artist says a hard thing in a simple way." The requiem serves as a perfect illustration. The number of books I've read on the grieving process only makes me dizzy. The discussion goes around in circles leading nowhere. Yet in 45 minutes of music and poetry, the whole congregation was in tears, relating to the universal experience of loss in deeply individual ways.

Music may be our church's main thrust into the arts, but it surely doesn't end there. We are becoming increasingly diverse with poems, plays, and the Arts Festival itself.

The arts play a unique complementary role in the life of our church. They give us a chance to catch our breath in the whirlwind of social catastrophes. We can pause, reflect, pray, and refuel our energies.

We can feel immensely proud of the role that the arts fill in church life. And we are all grateful that in these politically charged times, our church provides not only a means by which we try to right the wrongs, but our church also serves as refuge for the soul. TRG

Among Ourselves

In the Life

Rev. Matthew Cockrum

A few weeks ago at the annual Congregational Meeting the Governing Board introduced the concept of a size transition from a “pastoral” to a “program”-sized congregation. This lingo bounces around the world of church professionals and references complexity and size of staffing, programming, budget, attendance, participation and organizational structure, to name a few. Many factors influence congregations as they grow, mature, decline, atrophy. Resources indicate that congregations will shift back and forth at these transition points...dancing one side of a size transition and then another. Choices are made...or things “just happen”...pertaining to buildings, staff, worship services, educational programming...and all of these occurrences serve to either support the status quo, move toward greater complexity and sophistication or return to a former, edenic way of being. “It was all better when...”

I do not know which direction this congregation will choose to go in terms of its staffing, its programming and its funding.

I do suspect, though, that if you look at the life of this congregation over the course of its history you will see patterns, trends and histories. You will see times when this congregation’s internal ministries (those focusing less on social justice and more on management, funding and structure) tipped one way or another. And you will see how those tipping points were reached, assessed and then evaluated as to whether this was a good choice or bad choice in the long run.

Some of you here have already lived through some of these decisions and discernments. Your wisdom, encouragement, challenge and experience will be critical components of the next steps at First Unitarian Church.

We have entered a dance already in progress, learning the steps as we go, contributing to the music and creating new forms out of old.

Let us be curious, friends, about the dance, the music, and the possibilities within, between and beyond.

Here's to The Work!

Peace, Faith & Passion,
Matthew

P.S. I'll be joining adult chaperones traveling with Junior High youth to Boston June 6-11 and Senior High youth to South Dakota June 19-25. Please keep us in your prayers and well-wishes for safe travels and meaningful experiences.

Auction Item Cocktail Party held Saturday May 7th

-submitted by Bill Reed

Fun, fun, fun was the comment of guests who attended the Cocktail Party held by Diane Johnson and Bill Reed at their home. They opened their east bench home to 25 Unitarians for this auction item that raised $1,000 for the church. Drinks included Sazerac (Bill’s mother is from New Orleans) and Cowboy Lemonade (Di’s family is from Texas). Appetizers served included jackfruit tacos, red pepper dip and deviled eggs.

Also Root Beer Floatini was served as “dessert”. “Stump the bartender” was played during many lively conversations. Bill and Di plan to hold this again next auction.

Petition to Ban Plastic Bags in Salt Lake City by Liam Mountain LaMalfa, UU RE Student

Have you ever used a plastic bag? You probably did not think much of it. But plastic bags are dangerous in many ways. This is why they should be banned. Did you know that over 6,000 plastic bags are used every 5 seconds in the United States and these bags take 1,000 years to decompose, at least! Plastic bag factories create huge amounts of pollution. Plastic bags also create litter and are toxic to animals when they eat them. For example, plastic bags can blow into the ocean. Then, jellyfish-eating animals will devour the plastic, thinking it's a tasty treat. The animals die soon afterward. As you can see, plastic bags are very dangerous. This is why plastic bags should be banned, or in a few years, this planet will be in big trouble!

In order to solve this problem, many cities in the United States and countries around the world are trying to decrease the amount of plastic bags used. For example, Ireland has put a tax on plastic bags. Since then, the amount of plastic bags used in Ireland has gone down by over 90%! Many cities throughout California have banned plastic bags completely.

Because of what I have learned about the dangers of plastic bags, I think that we should ban the use of plastic bags in Salt Lake City. I have started a petition at Uintah Elementary School where I am in fourth grade. The petition is now at the Environmental Ministry Table here at the First Unitarian Church of Salt Lake City if you would like to sign it. With other kids from RE at First Church and my school that want to come with me, I will be taking all of the signatures to a Salt Lake City Council meeting before they vote on banning plastic bags this Fall. Thank you for your support on this very important issue!

NOTE: Thank you for helping Liam support this most important cause.

In Service,
Julie Miller, DRE

Board Bits

What a Great Congregation!

Thank you to everyone who attended the Annual Congregational Meeting last Sunday. During the meeting, members elected Philip Moos and Matt Wilson to serve on the Nominating Committee and Tim Chambless, Teresa Dieringer, and Jan Crane to the Board of Trustees. Now, if only the Republicans and the Democrats can follow our example and conduct their election business with the same dignity and efficiency in July!

Thank you, also, to the 133 people who completed our Annual Congregational Survey. The information that you provide through your responses is of great value to your Board. We now have three-years of data that serve as a measure of our progress towards meeting our ENDS. Look for a detailed summary of this year's survey in an upcoming Torch.
